Oldham Cancer Support Centre

Counselling Service

For People Living With Cancer

What is counselling?

Counselling offers confidential sessions based upon a Person-Centred model of counseling, this adheres to the British Association for Counselling and Psychotherapy (BACP) professional code of ethics.

Sessions are offered to help clients explore difficult issues which have an adverse affect upon their psychological, emotional or physical well-being.

Counselling is not about giving advice; it is about client and counsellor working together in a therapeutic manner to empower the client to resolve their issues.

Questions about the services

Who will I see?

The Centre has several counsellors who are all trained to provide this service. You will see the same counsellor throughout your treatment.

How many sessions will I need?

This will vary person to person. Assessments will be ongoing.

Is there a charge for this service?
